- Nesting Birds: - Some of you may have noticed that the Oystercatcher birds are back nesting in the quad beside the Assembly Hall. They have a nest with eggs in beside the tree near the benches in the middle of the quad. They have been returning here for many years now to hatch their eggs and we have always been very considerate and respectful of them in the past. If they are disturbed too much, they will not return to their nest and the eggs won't hatch. Similarly, once they have hatched, they need a bit of space to come in to feed the chicks, otherwise they won't make it. Please try not to disturb them too much and give them some space by staying the other side of the cones that have been set out. Many thanks.

S4 – S5

- A Journey to Medicine: - The Medical Schools Council have recently published a new series of support resources called a Journey to Medicine. It starts with the considerations to make before application, including work experience and course types. From there it goes through the processes of the application itself and how to understand entry requirements. Finally it offers advice for the interview and on what to do when results are received, whether it is good news or otherwise or time to think of alternatives. If you are interested in obtaining a link to this resource please see Mr Johnston in Guidance. Mr A Johnston

S5 – S6

- Advanced Higher History Pupils: - There are still a large number of Aberdeen University Books to be returned. Can I please ask that all resources are returned to the library before the end of the week. They are now overdue and the library is being charged for them. Thank you Mrs McCue
